INVEST IN RWANDA

Rwanda's construction sector thrives amid soaring demand for quality housing, driven by rapid economic growth. With a solid GDP growth averaging 8% from 2000 to 2018 and a projected 7.8% growth for 2025 according to the IMF, Rwanda offers a dynamic investment environment.

The country's favorable Doing Business ranking, placing it 38th globally and the top-ranked country in continental Africa by The World Bank, underscores its business-friendly climate. Rwanda faces a significant demand for urban housing, requiring an estimated 150,000 housing units annually, as reported by the Rwanda Development Board (RDB). Urban planning regulations, led by the City of Kigali, are transparent and effective, providing investors with stability and clarity. These factors make Rwanda a compelling destination for construction and real estate investment.

Within the provisions of existing regulations, foreigners can own a property in Rwanda.

Imara Properties was mentioned in RDB annual report 2024 as an example of 2023 re-investment.
